END THE BENEFITS AND THE ASYLUM SEEKERS WILL STOP COMING

It starts like this →

It finishes like this ↓

LIKE MOTHS ATTRACTED to a bright light on a dark night, asylum seekers are making a beeline across Europe for Britain.

They spurn the refuge offered by other European countries nearer to their homelands, and press on, suffering hardship after hardship, to get to Britain.

"They come to Britain because of our compassionate reputation. We are a beacon of tolerance and understanding shining out from an increasingly xenophobic Europe," say our bleeding hearts brigade, wringing their hands in anguish that anyone should even question the motives of these asylum seekers.

Britain is a beacon, there's no doubt about that. But it's a beacon advertising something-for-nothing benefits which beams across the whole of Europe attracting economic migrants looking for a handout.

Each asylum application costs Britain £14,523 a year and that doesn't include their legal aid bills when appealing against deportation.

No wonder the Home Office is facing a £1 billion shortfall in its asylum budget. It just can't cope with the influx, as another 30,000 migrants lodged claims to stay in Britain during the first three months of this year.

If you turn out the light on a dark night, the moths will stop coming.

In Britain if we stop their benefits, the asylum seekers will stop coming.

Ten years on from the death of Stephen Lawrence, the authorities seem to have lost their enthusiasm for combatting racist killers.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Pupils told to drop French and learn Albanian!

HEADTEACHERS have called for schools to teach African and Asian languages instead of French and German in a reform designed to reflect the "ethnic mix" of the British population. At its annual conference in Torquay, the National Association of Headteachers discussed giving African languages, including Somali and Hausa, the same importance as the main European tongues. The headteachers also suggested that Albanian, Punjabi and Urdu be added to the curriculum.

Labour demands 'minority-only' sixth form places

BRADFORD'S LABOUR-run education authority are proposing introducing ethnic-minority quotas in the city's schools so that no single ethnic group would be allowed to take more than 75 per cent of places in any of its state run school sixth forms or sixth form colleges. If the plan is adopted, all-white, middle-class schools in the West Yorkshire city and its surrounding towns would have to allocate a quarter of the prized sixth-form places to ethnic-minority students.

THE VICTIMS

Conflicting signals in response to latest racist murders

STEPHEN LAWRENCE, Ross Parker and Gavin Hopley were three teenagers who had their young lives snuffed out by brutal racist murderers.

18 year-old Stephen was knifed to death as he waited at a bus stop in Eltham, South-East London in April 1993. 17 year-old Ross was knifed to death as he made his way home from work in Peterborough in September 2001, while 19 year-old Gavin was kicked to death after a taxi dropped him off in Glodwick, Oldham in February 2002.

The murder of Stephen Lawrence, and the media frenzy that accompanied it, sent reverberations through the criminal justice system and led to the Macpherson Report which changed the methods of policing in this country. The hunt for his killers led to arrests, charges, charges being dropped, private prosecutions, more charges, an inquiry and finally acquittal for the five suspects.

£30 million was spent on this one case over a period of nine years and when the Metropolitan Police failed to find Stephen's murderers they paid Doreen and Neville Lawrence £320,000 in compensation for the lack of success of the murder investigation.

There's a memorial plaque at the bus stop where Stephen died and security cameras watch over the plaque to ensure that it is not defaced.

The repercussions from the death of Stephen Lawrence, quite rightly, sent out a loud and clear signal to white racist thugs that attacks on Britain's ethnic minorities would not be tolerated. The message was unequivocal.

But nearly ten years on from the death of Stephen Lawrence the authorities seem to have lost their enthusiasm for combatting racist killers.

There was no media frenzy when Ross Parker was knifed to death, and Gavin Hopley kicked to death by Muslim racist thugs within just four months.

The Pakistani youths charged with killing Ross were even granted bail and were able to walk free from court, while the gang of Pakistanis arrested for the attack on Gavin had murder charges against them dropped and now face the lesser charge of violent disorder.

There are no memorials at the places where these two youngsters met their end. Just graffiti on a wall in Peterborough and a spilled tin of red paint in Oldham.

The lack of media outrage over the death of Ross and Gavin and the apparent half-hearted efforts of the murder investigation sends out a completely different signal to Muslim racist murderers. It's a message that indicates that the authorities are not that bothered about racist attacks on white British youngsters when the assailants are from the ethnic minorities.

Now it's official - Top Blair aide reports

Traditional Labour voters are turning to the BNP!

THE BRITISH NATIONAL Party is taking voters and supporters away from New Labour at such a rate that Tony Blair summoned an emergency meeting of aides and strategists at Chequers over the weekend 15th/16th June to discuss the matter.

Even former US President, Bill Clinton, was called in to hear news of the political earthquake that is rocking Downing Street. Producing the evidence of Labour's haemorrhaging support was the Prime Minister's senior advisor and strategist, Philip Gould. He is Britain's leading research expert who analyses voting trends through his 300-plus political and public focus groups.

Gould is no lightweight but a highly respected researcher who has worked in senior strategic and polling roles in a large number of national elections. These include President Clinton in 1992 and 1996; and the governments of Sweden, Norway, the Netherlands, Greece and Denmark. In 1993 and 1994 he co-ordinated the European election

Gould's book on New Labour

PHILIP GOULD:
A highly experienced researcher highlighted the growth of the BNP campaigns, arranging for focus groups to be conducted in all European Union countries.

He is also the author of "The Unfinished Revolution" an analysis of the modernisation of the Labour Party.

Philip Gould stunned those at Chequers as he spelt out the findings from his focus groups.

* Blue collar workers are supporting and, where possible, voting for the British National Party.

* Labour core voters are defecting to the British National Party.

* Working-class voters feel disengaged from politics and abandoned by politicians.

* Traditional Labour voters regard themselves as very British, not European, and resent the rise in crime and the flood of asylum seekers into Britain.

* Evidence from polling and focus groups show there is a real possibility of a surge in support among the working class for the popular nationalism espoused by the BNP.

Philip Gould's findings were backed-up by a study from the National Centre for Social Research. On social issues such as law and order, sexual morality and minority groups, many working-class voters indicated that they would support the BNP rather than Labour. On race, nearly 40% believed that attempts to give equal opportunities to blacks and Asians had "gone too far".

Kashmir: 150,000 claim family links with Britain!

HOME SECRETARY, David Blunkett, has drawn up emergency plans to deal with a new wave of 150,000 asylum-seekers from India and Pakistan if the two countries go to war over Kashmir.

The Foreign Office estimates the number of British passport holders in the two countries to be 21,000, but at least SIX TIMES as many have family links in this country and would see Britain as their natural refuge.

The prospect of a new wave of refugees is causing alarm within Whitehall. The Home Office agreed that its budget for dealing with asylum seekers was already severely overstretched.

In 2001-02, there was an overspend of more than £500 million and this year a bail-out of £1 billion from Treasury reserves is needed.

A city the size of Derby has 'disappeared'

ASYLUM SEEKERS are now vanishing at a rate of more than 137 a day and living illegally in Britain, despite repeated Government pledges to crack down on the problem.

The latest figures show that 276,214 refugees who have been ordered out of Britain have absconded and the Home Office has no idea where they are.

The total "lost" by officials since 1990 outnumbers the population of a city the size of Derby and represents an increase of 150,000 over the past three years.

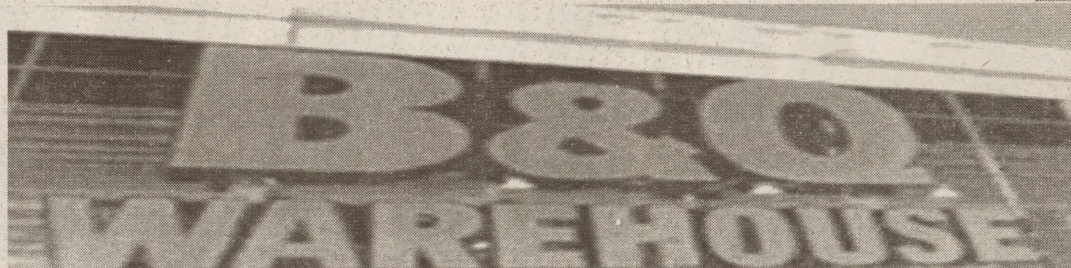

Last year, 87,000 asylum seekers were refused permission to stay in Britain, but only 9,000 were deported or are known to have left the country.

It's the leaving of Liverpool

ASYLUM SEEKERS from Turkey and Iraq refused to leave Liverpool and move to Blackburn because they have never heard of the town before.

Blackburn Council had already made preparations for their arrival, but the expected busloads did not show up because none of the asylum seekers were prepared to travel.

Liverpool Labour councillor, Jane Corbett said: "I am extremely angry that the wishes of the asylum seekers are being ignored. They have made it clear they want to remain in Liverpool."

Street thugs dictate policy of DIY giant

B&Q IS THE number one DIY retailer in Europe and the third largest in the world. It even has four stores in China, including the world's largest in Shanghai.

But despite its size and massive customer base around the world, a handful of street thugs in Sunderland have managed to intimidate the DIY giant into dismissing one of its workers.

Kevin Scott, has worked for B&Q for the last six and a half years, but in May he was told by management that he was losing his job because he had stood as a British National Party candidate in the local elections in May. B&Q bosses claimed that they had received numerous complaints about Mr Scott's employment with the company and faced a demonstration outside the Sunderland store.

But Freedom can reveal that the firm received just eight complaints from local Trotskyite street thugs and the demonstrated by the Socialist Workers Party failed to materialise because no one turned up.

For once the British media have been very fair in this matter, and Kevin has been given the opportunity to voice his concerns in the local papers and on Tyne Tees television. He spoke at some length about his treatment on Radio Newcastle but B&Q declined to be interviewed for the same programme, after becoming increasingly embarrassed by the furore their actions had caused.

Nationally, Kevin was interviewed on BBC Radio Four's "The World Tonight" and "Today" programmes. The sacking appears to be in breach of B&Q's own equal opportunities strategy which states that "all people will be treated equally and fairly as both customers and employees" and that B&Q seeks a "balanced workforce that reflects the local community". Kevin Scott and his eight colleagues in Sunderland and Gateshead polled an average vote of nearly 20% across the wards they contested, which is one-in-five of those who voted. Apparently, according to B&Q's actions, these voters don't "reflect the local community" as much as eight Trotskyite street thugs.

New Labour increases Overseas Aid budget

NEW LABOUR says it hasn't the funds available to keep our old peoples' homes open and is closing them up and down the country, but Tony Blair & Co. have managed to find an extra £800 million for overseas aid. Britain hands out in excess of £4 billion on foreign aid, making us one of the world's biggest spenders on international development. That's 0.7% of our gross national budget.

In real terms Britain's aid budget for 2002-03 has topped £6 billion with an additional £2 billion being swallowed up looking after asylum seekers arriving in Britain.

It's a scandal that Britain's hard-earned resources are being given away to people who have nothing to do with Britain and care little for our country. Yet our pensioners, many who saw service in the last war, are being turfed out onto the streets because Labour councils claim they haven't the money to modernise their care homes.

"Look behind you Tony, charity should begin at home."

Thoughts on Immigration

*The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society.

*The British National Party is opposed to 'multiculturalism' because it fragments society and generates conflict.

*The British National Party seeks to protect and preserve the ethnic and cultural integrity of the British people.

*Labour and Conservative Governments, for the past thirty years, have allowed large scale immigration into Britain from the Third World against the clear wishes of the British people.

*Now leading population experts predict that the native British people will be a minority in our own country within 60 years.

*The British National Party will end immigration and the settlement of asylum seekers in Britain.

*The British National Party will encourage immigrants to return to their country of ethnic origin by providing generous financial incentives to help those who want to return home.

Britain funds car bombers

MUSLIM communities in Britain are financing Al-Qaeda militants planning attacks against the West, according to intelligence officials in Islamabad.

A senior Pakistani intelligence official said cash arriving from Britain for militant groups was "one of our big concerns".

British Muslims from Bradford claim to have smuggled tens of thousands of pounds into Pakistan to fund weapons training for scores of Muslims recruited in Britain and Bangladesh.

They claim that collected cash from wealthy Pakistani businessmen in Britain has been used for the purchase of cars used for bomb attacks in Karachi, in which a total of 26 people have died.

THE GOVERNMENT IS planning to reduce the British Army to its weakest level in 160 years with a new and savage round of defence cuts which will leave Britain with fewer than 100,000 full-time soldiers for the first time since 1839. Plans being drawn up at Tony Blair's behest would leave the Army with just 95,000 personnel over the next five years. As with previous rounds of defence cuts by both Labour and Tory Governments over the last forty years, the effect will be to end the glorious histories of yet more illustrious regiments after centuries of proud service to our country, further to undermine our nation's ability to defend itself.

Already the Army has been stealthily shrunk by failing to recruit sufficient recruits to keep its strength at establishment levels. The Army is now 6,070 soldiers short of its official target of 107,000. One of the reasons for this shortfall is politically correct attempts to increase the percentage of ethnic minorities in the ranks by turning away suitable white recruits if insufficient ethnic ones come forward. Regiments such as the Parachute Regiment have just been ordered to reduce their numbers by 150 men to save £3 million. In another planned cut, the entire Defence Medical Services, which supply medical staff to all three Services, is under review and likely to be scrapped. But when the Tories closed all the military hospitals ten years ago "to save money", the end result was that far more money was and is spent sending injured servicemen and women to private hospitals for treatment. needs of national defence mean that they can hardly take their place in the lengthening NHS queues for treatment!

While these latest round of cuts are in the pipeline, our diminishing numbers of soldiers are being stretched to the limit in the service of Tony Blair strutting his stuff on the world stage. He is stripping Britain's defences to put our armed forces at the disposal of the UN and the US in ever more remote and irrelevant conflicts from the deserts of Afghanistan to the jungles of West Africa, from the backwoods of Bosnia to the mountains of Macedonia. None of these tours of duty have anything to do with defending Britain or British interests.

Soon all this will be left to the smallest army Britain has had for centuries, except for a few years in the 1830's when we were the World's greatest naval power with no obvious enemies. Senior officers privately admit that with new Labour's economy sized Army we will have to rely on part-time Territorials to keep our country's defences operating at all.

Disbanding more and more of our Army whilst sending more and more of our remaining soldiers further and further from anywhere relevant to the defence of our homeland in the service of the Prime Minister's ego is a disgrace that verges on treason.

Protecting

It is time to bring what soldiers we have left home to do their proper job - not keeping warring tribes apart at the ends of the Earth but protecting our people and our land. It is also time to ditch political correctness, "ethnic balance" and the rest of the trendy nonsense and recruit enough soldiers - and sailors and airmen - to keep our country and our people safe. We have the best armed forces in the world - and we must maintain them!

Labour is looking to scrap the Defence Medical Services, which supply medical staff to all three Services

Raj on Britain

The thoughts of Rajinder Singh

Now, at last, many Sikhs and Hindus are saying to the British media, "Don't lump us all together in the same 'Asian' pot."

Our culture, spirituality, history, social ethos, food habits, treatment of women, and even religion, are completely different from the Muslims who derive their inspiration from Mecca in Saudi Arabia and pray in Arabic throughout the world.

"We are separate. So please, describe us separately!"

It reminds me of Mahatma Gandhi who used to chant, "Ishwar and Allah are ONE. Rama and Rahim are ONE. Hindu and Muslim are ONE. Only the evil British are different from us all."

In the event while the British left quietly and decently, the followers of Allah promptly slaughtered one million of Mr. Gandhi's followers throughout western and eastern India (today's Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively) and forcibly expelled some 15 million from their ancestral homes.

What is amazing to me is that the leaders of the Sikh and Hindu communities in this country had to wait until the aftermath of the September 11 attack on democracy before realising this!

How ridiculous it was in the first place to be sitting happily under this common 'ASIAN' umbrella when back home the Muslims and the Sikhs sit 'poles apart' in Lahore and Amritsar, and the Muslims and the Hindus sit 'light years' away from each other in North and South Kashmir respectively, wanting to throw nuclear bombs at each another!

If we look at nature, ravens at home do not sit together on one platform with the doves after flying to another country!

The truth had to come out at last, THANKS TO THE BNP.

Rajinder Singh is on the BNP's Ethnic Liaison Committee

New Labour: highly charged with plenty of conviction

THE 'HIGHLY regarded' Labour leader of York City Council has been charged with offences including blackmail and soliciting prostitutes.

Rod Hills, who was an outspoken critic of the British National Party in the run-up to the May council elections, has been sacked as head of the Council as a result of the charges.

Rotherham Labour councillor, Jahangir Akhtar, was sentenced to 130 hours' community service after punching and kicking a customer in the Minar Balti restaurant in the town.

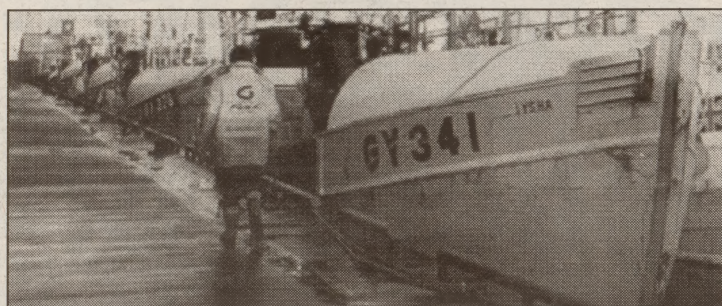

At Hull Crown Court, Judge Simon Lawler spared Akhtar a prison sentence because of "his help to community relations in Rotherham."

Always in fear of being offensive

WORKERS AT the Land Rover plant in Solihull were ordered to remove their flags of St George supporting England's World Cup team.

A spokeswoman for Land Rover in the West Midlands said: "We asked them to take them down because we are a diverse firm and to allow England flags to be displayed would have meant allowing flags of other competing nations to be put up as well."

Managers at Newcastle City Council have been sent a memo warning them not to let patriotic staff get carried away during the World Cup or to display the flag of St George for fear of offending non-England supporters.

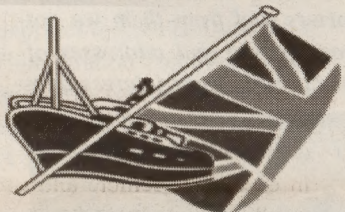

British fishermen now face an uncertain future with over 700 boats due to be taken out of circulation.

Get Britain out NOW!

THE European Union are at it again and through their Common Fisheries Policy are taking a further step in dismantling Britain's fishing industry.

After giving Spanish fishermen carte blanche to plunder Britain's marine resources, the EU has now discovered that our southern European colleagues have been over-fishing and have left stocks of cod, haddock, herring and hake dangerously low. Now Brussels has decided to start protecting fish stocks and has decreed a 11% cut in the number of Europe's fishermen and a 60% cut in the time they spend at sea. This is a further nail in the coffin of our fishing industry. 16,000 British fishermen now face an uncertain future, with over 700 boats due to be taken out of circulation. There will be a knock-on effect for the 19,000 employed in fish processing and for the 7,000 working for the country's 3,000 fishmongers.

The British National Party is the only political party that will withdraw Britain from the Common Fisheries Policy and the European Union, enabling UK waters to be brought back under national sovereignty.

We must have control over our own fishing industry so that we can protect fish stocks and provide a thriving livelihood for future generations of fishermen in our traditional fishing ports. Around the British Isles is the greatest marine resource anywhere in the world, and Britain should be a world leader in the husbandry of that resource, not just left begging for scraps from the EU.

Please help to keep the BNP moving forward

After the most fantastic election ever for British Nationalism, the British National Party is faced with a welcome problem - supporting our new councillors!

In addition, the party is seeking legal advice with regard to possible electoral fraud in Oldham and also in Burnley. On top of this, as the party is growing, more needs to be done - more travelling, more organising, bigger telephone bills and more postage.

Success in Burnley means that Burnley BNP needs a digital duplicator of its own. It has been agreed that the party nationally will find £1,000 for this if Burnley BNP can match it. Counsel's opinion on electoral fraud will also cost around £1,000.

£2,000 needs to be raised for the party's legal fund - something that needs to be built up to enable the BNP to aggressively pursue those who break the law in opposing our party. Many people forget that just to keep functioning day to day, the party needs money and £5,000 is being earmarked for general expenses, including the organising of new groups, to capitalise on our extra potential.

Lastly £3,000 is being set aside for security. The events in Holland are a timely reminder that we must always be on our guard.

The magnificent victory obtained in May will count for little if it is not followed up. Please send as much as you can afford to: The Treasurer, P.O. Box 16, York, YO61, 3YH. Cheques made payable to 'British National Party' or 'British Heritage'

BURNLEY & PENDLE BRANCH ORGANISER: Steve Smith is a local accountant.

Burnley BNP: The secret of their success

THE BURNLEY Branch of the British National Party certainly hit the headlines in April and May by putting up 13 candidates for the local council elections in the town and then getting three councillors elected.

Last June, at the General Election, the BNP polled one of its best votes in Burnley when local accountant and branch organiser Steve Smith polled 4,150 votes - 11.3% of those who voted.

So what's the secret of Burnley's success? Freedom went to the East Lancashire town to find out.

When we caught up with Steve Smith, he was preparing for the monthly branch meeting in a huge room above a local pub in the centre of Burnley. Recent attendances have been around the 200 mark but even last year these regular gatherings attracted between 60 to 80 regulars.

Steve gave us the run down on Burnley BNP.

"There was no BNP organisation in Burnley when I joined the party in May 1999. In fact we had just two paid-up members. The first thing I did was to open a local post office box and start building up a database of anyone who showed the slightest interest in the party.

"Simon Bennett and myself started leafletting the town with the usual recruitment leaflets and as our list of members and supporters started to grow, we nurtured them by sending them a copy of Freedom each month and a letter informing them of meetings and activities.

"Our first meeting, held in August 1999, attracted 20 supporters and from them we got more names and addresses of people who were interested in the BNP for the database.

"In the early days we picked a ward, Fulleddge Ward near Turf Moor, and leafletted it three times in nine months. Simon then stood as BNP candidate in Fulleddge in May 2000 and polled 20% of the vote. That result set us on our way and we haven't looked back since.

A-Board

"Our advertising board was a major development. It was very nerve-wracking taking it out for the first time on a trailer attached to the back of my car. I parked up at 7 o'clock in the morning to catch people going to work. Around 2,000 people saw it on that first occasion. Some people were hostile, some amused and some positively delighted. The A-board showed the people of Burnley that the BNP was part of the local political scene. It is a vital part of our propaganda.

"Now we have a stream of volunteers to take it out and it always gets a great response. That initial fear of facing the public has long gone. We canvassed extensively for the local elections and held a demo outside the Town Hall recently."

Time and time again during the interview, Steve Smith referred back to the database and nurturing the support of those on it. For a new branch to succeed it must build up a record of members and supporters and keep in touch with them on a regular basis.

High calibre candidates in Calderdale

HALIFAX AND CALDERDALE British National Party organiser, Adrian Marsden, was delighted with the response to a BNP meeting in Halifax last month.

Sixty-three members and supporters were present to discuss plans for contesting elections next May.

"Calderdale is suffering from poor housing, violent gangs, drug dealers, car crime and a local council that hasn't the intelligence to sort out these problems, let alone the desire," Mr Marsden told the audience.

"We must ensure that our candidates are of the highest calibre and that in each ward we contest, local activists quickly identify the issues concerning voters."

The branch has earmarked five wards to concentrate their efforts on and already two candidates have been selected.

Join the Trafalgar Club

Which Red Cross do you think is right?

THE BRITISH National Party has launched a campaign to persuade the British Red Cross to return to its founding principles and get back to helping the needy in Britain and abroad.

The leaders of the British Red Cross have outraged millions of decent Britons by supporting the asylum centre at Sangatte, from which huge numbers of bogus 'refugees' gate-crash the Channel Tunnel.

The latest Red Cross annual report reveals that the charity helped more than 20,000 asylum seekers last year. These are people who have no right to be here because they have passed through half-a-dozen safe countries where they could have claimed asylum.

Even worse are the press reports

Care homes closed by the Red Cross

about the Red Cross closing down its last residential homes for the disabled and for pensioners in order to save money. The Red Cross have now admitted, "Of all new services developed by the British Red Cross during 2001, around one in eight were for refugees and asylum seekers, showing that this is a priority." The Daily Mail has urged its readers to boycott Red Cross shops in order to protest against it encouraging the asylum flood which recent opinion polls show is opposed by 97% of people in Britain. That figure means that even many members of ethnic minorities oppose this new wave of immigration, confirming what the British National Party says that "it's a question of space - not of race."

The BNP doesn't want people to boycott the Red Cross because we don't want to see the good work it does suffer.

But something needs to be done to make the Red Cross drop its pro-asylum bias.

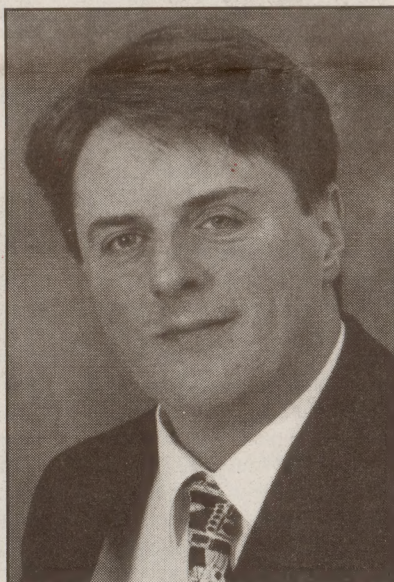

So we're asking you to keep on supporting the local Red Cross charity shop, but to have a quiet word with the staff (who probably aren't happy either) the next time you go in to donate unwanted items or to buy something. Ask them politely to pass on your opposition to their bosses using your money to help encourage asylum spongers to come to Britain.

You could also write to express your disgust to:

The Red Cross, 9 Grosvenor Crescent, London SW1X 7EJ.

If enough of us complain, there's a chance that the British Red Cross will get the message and go back to helping the genuinely needy - in Britain and in their own countries - rather than encouraging the economic migrants and criminals posing as asylum seekers.

We don't need any more immigration

SPEAKING AFTER the EU's meeting of Foreign Ministers at Luxembourg in June, the Foreign Secretary, Jack Straw said: "Europe's future prosperity depends on immigration."

Prime Minister, Tony Blair, went even further, "Britain must have controlled immigration. We need 150,000 immigrants a year to combat labour shortages, a declining population and an ageing society. We need them to promote economic growth and to look after us in our old age." The British National Party doesn't agree. The BNP argues that there should be no further immigration into Britain.

We don't need any more immigration because Britain is already one of the most densely populated countries in the world, ten times as densely populated as America, and a hundred times as densely populated as Canada.

We don't need any more immigration because Britain does not have a declining population. There are more births than deaths each year, and that is forecast to continue for at least the next 20 years.

We don't need any more immigration because Britain already has, in real terms, 4 million people without work.

We don't need any more immigration because Britain has a huge surplus of unskilled workers who can't find employment.

Immigration is now running at the highest levels since records began and is quadrupling the rate of population growth.

The fabric of our society is changing beyond recognition and the influx of these huge numbers is placing unbearable pressure on the labour market, the elderly, the homeless, the environment and those ethnic minority communities already integrated into our way of life.

Tony Blair tells us that we need immigrants to care for us as our society ages. But then what happens when those immigrants brought in start to age? Who cares for them?

Britain needs to grow old gracefully with our Government looking after the needs of Britain's elderly through good housekeeping and policies based on the national interest.

Globalisation and immigration destroy everything in their path from culture through to the environment. They are twin evils that feed off each other, and that is why the BNP believe they must be opposed.

Why the media is out of control

TONY BLAIR tells us after New Labour had had a particularly bad week in the press, "The media are out of control!"

Yes, the British National Party felt the same way after the Daily Express had seven consecutive front pages attacking the BNP in the week before polling day for the May council elections.

Today in the media there is no impartial reporting. Everyone from the producers and editors to their presenters and humble hacks have a political agenda to promote - and that is why the media is out of control.

They all have an agenda because they have been encouraged to do so by the political parties that seek their patronage.

But allowing the news to be doctored to suit your policies is a dangerous game. Once you have indicated that the truth doesn't matter, then you give a green light to any individual of influence within the media to tamper with the news for their own particular ends.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITY RESTS ON THEIR SHOULDERS
BNP councillors Terry Grogan, Carol Hughes and David Edwards arriving at Burnley Town Hall for a council meeting.

The BNP is the fastest growing party this country has ever known

THE BRITISH National Party's star is very much in the ascendancy at present; for the sake of our nation and the future of our children, please don't waste this opportunity.

The BNP is the fastest growing party this country has ever known and if this momentum can be maintained, there are seats to be won in future elections

I work in an office in the centre of Leeds alongside people from Harrogate, Ilkley and Horsforth whose deepest regret on May 2nd was that they could not vote for the BNP.

An increasing number of people are now beginning to realise that we have lost effective control of our country. We are made to feel guilty for even thinking, let alone expressing, any view on immigrants or immigration and we are being strangled by political correctness.

People feel more deeply about this than they have anything else before. They have become politically alive and see the BNP as the only hope for the future.

Roger Greenwood, Hebden Bridge

They come for economic benefits

I CURRENTLY work alongside an asylum seeker whose name is Jamal.

He is a Kurd from northern Iraq but fled the country after Saddam Hussain attacked his village.

This was before Britain and America installed a "No Fly Zone" over the area.

Britain maintains a high level of personnel to ensure the safety of the Kurds and we as a nation are prepared to risk the lives of our own people to defend Jamal's kinfolk from further incursions from Saddam Hussain.

Jamal left Iraq for Italy where he was resident 14 months. He chose to leave because of the high cost of living. He then went to Greece where he stayed for two years before moving to Spain and then France. He gained access into Britain on a freight train through the Channel Tunnel.

I believe everyone has the right to live without fear of persecution or death. Jamal would probably be quite safe now back in his homeland. Even he concedes that he was quite safe in Italy and Greece. Iraqi Kurds have no valid or legitimate reason to come to Britain seeking asylum. They come to Britain for the economic benefits our Government makes available to them.

Mr A. Wilson, Doncaster.

Adding to our vocabulary

I WOULD like to introduce a new word to the English language that will help describe those opposed to BNP policy in the briefest of terms.

The word is 'PILOC', and it stands for 'pro-immigration left of centerist'.

Ralph Musgrave, Co Durham.

The end of British manufacturing?

THERE IS one thing that will have a crippling effect on our economy in the future and that is that China has recently joined the World Trade Organisation (WTO). This will give the Chinese easier access to compete in the manufacturing industries of western countries. Just look at how many goods in our shops are already made in China - and this is without aid from the WTO.

British manufacturing will become obsolete within ten years and the old parties will do nothing to stop this.

T. Bell, Glasgow.

Survival depends on white flighters

WHAT A surprise I got when I turned up at my local BNP meeting - the hall was packed and every seat was occupied. At last, I thought, the people of Dorset are waking up.

But I'm afraid that wasn't the case. The hall was full of white flighters, people who had moved from London, Birmingham and Nottingham to bring up their families in Dorset's lovely environment.

It appears local folk aren't concerned about the threat to our way of life that is posed by opening our shores to anyone from anywhere who wants to come.

If Dorset is to survive, it is down to the white flighters.

Peter Stafford, Ferndown, Dorset.

Anything but impartial

IT HARDLY need be mentioned that the "impartial" BBC presenters invariably qualify the BNP with epithets such as: dangerous, extreme, far right, frightening, and so on. This biased and vindictive reporting clearly violates the letter and the spirit of certain sections of the BBC's Royal Charter and the BBC Agreement to wit.

Paragraph 3, 3.2 (c) of Programme Content calls for "impartial coverage of news and current affairs".

Paragraph 5, 5.1 (c) of Programme Standards instructs "treat controversial subjects with due accuracy and impartiality, both in the Corporation's news services and in the more general field of programmes dealing with matters of public policy or of political or industrial controversy".

Perhaps the party's legal department could do something to gag these wretched presenters, who are anything but impartial.

N.G. Charnley, Blackpool.

ASLEF is not about job protection

I JOINED the railway in 1990 and since 1992 have worked as a train driver. I joined the union for job protection and to look after my rights as an employee.

It is a sad fact, however, that ASLEF has been taken over by the ultra-left and is now no more than a platform for their views.

A recent circular appears to state that ASLEF policy is that if you have political ideals that are not militant left-wing then it will refuse to allow you, as a train driver, to be a member of the train drivers' union and therefore refuse to give you the protection it is there to provide.

Wimbledon's centenary year and the Queen's Jubilee inspired 31 year-old Virginia Wade, Britain's much maligned tennis star, to scale the greatest heights of her career and become Wimbledon Ladies Champion.

Wade won a mistake-ridden final in three sets from Dutch champion Betty Stove, but it was her semi-final victory over reigning champion Chris Evert that had captured the imagination of the nation.

Crime and anti-social behaviour is making life a misery in Streatham

BABINGTON ROAD IN London SW16 is rapidly becoming a no-go area in the evenings. Street crime and violence is now so commonplace that the local MP, Labour's Keith Hill, has called it "a very serious quality of life issue for local residents."

In a letter to the Metropolitan Police, the MP for Streatham revealed; "residents are now reluctant to use the streets in the evenings" and warned that "there is a general sense that the situation is so uncontrolled that more serious violence could ensue."

There's no doubt that Babington Road has become the focal point for street gangs who appear to be waging a war against the local community. In recent weeks...

- * the Manor Arms public house has been invaded;
- * the launderette in Ambleside Avenue has been occupied and vandalised and the proprietor beaten up;
- * the stairwells in two council house blocks, Clive and Leigh Courts, have been occupied and urinated in;
- * an 87 year-old woman resident has been harassed by a group of girls;

TOP: Labour MP for Streatham, Keith Hill acknowledges that some residents in his constituency are now reluctant to use the streets in the evenings.

* a 15 year-old boy subjected to gross intimidation;
* residents are regularly subjected to foul-mouthed abuse.
* the frontage to properties, both brick walls and wooden fences, have been vandalised. Keith Hill believes the troublemakers are youths attracted by the Somali cafes on Gleneagle Road. This is confirmed by local resident Geoff O'Grady. "My car was surrounded by Somali youths while I was waiting in traffic in Babington Road. When I tapped the horn twice they started gesturing aggressively and told me to get out of the car. This one youth then said, 'I'm gonna cut ya. Ya dissing me. Don't diss me man!' I managed to move on but they punched the windows and kicked the bodywork denting the bumper and smashing the indicator light. One also cleared the contents of his throat and nostrils and spat it all over the windscreen."

Within the last two years numerous Somali businesses have sprung up at the top end of Gleneagle Road. There are now 11 cafes and shops in a 100 yard stretch on either side of the road.

Local residents, who are discussing forming a Neighbourhood Watch with a hotline to Streatham Police Station, want a high profile policing operation over a sustained period of time to clear these troublemakers from the streets.

BNP must help mothers stay at home

by Billi Beckett

THE PRIORITIES of married women with children revolve around the home. Most of them are forced to work to make ends meet, but their minds are constantly on their children and the family. But having to go out to work means you are not at home, and recent surveys from the Institute for Social and Economic Research and the Rowntree Trust have clearly shown that children suffer when the mother has to work.

Benefits provided as half-hearted incentives to support mothers who work are confusing and misguided. Half of these could be scrapped if the Government changed tack and encouraged mothers to stay at home and concentrate on bringing up their children. Raising Child Allowance to £120 a week would give mothers the choice of being able to stay at home if they wished.

We are told by our exploiting media that women want it all. They want well paid jobs, a nice house, cars, holidays, childcare and a submissive house husband who earns a fair wage but at the same time doesn't mind busying himself with the household chores.

That's not the case for the majority of working class mothers.

Most women only work because they have to. They constantly worry about their children and in many cases act as unpaid carers looking after elderly relatives. They want their husbands out working, bringing in a full-time wage to support the family.

What women really want is stability. They don't want to keep worrying about money and they want more time to spend with their children protecting them from all the dangers that threaten them during their early and formative years.

Mothers at home hold this society together, yet they are actively discriminated against by all the main political parties.

I'm hoping that the British National Party will firmly stand behind the family, family values and a mother's right to stay at home and look after her children. To do this Child Allowance must be raised so that extra money can come into a home, along with the father's wage packet, without the family being penalised.

Imports and the EU threaten the British Oak

by Simon Banks

AFUNGAL disease of oak trees has recently been found in plants imported from America. The disease is called Sudden Oak Death and is so rampant that all the oaks in a 9 square mile area of Berkeley, California, have died.

The disease can be carried in plants of rhododendron, viburnum and cranberry, and it is specimens of these that have been found to have the disease in English nurseries in West Sussex, Lincolnshire, Dorset and Lancashire.

The authorities fear a disaster on the same scale as Dutch Elm disease, which decimated the hedgerows of our beautiful elm in the 1970s.

Recently though, mature sycamores, chestnuts and oaks have filled the gaps and provided greenery and shade again. Now all our oak trees face suffering the same fate as the elm thanks to an imported disease.

The EU have stated that even if the British oak stock is decimated, British acorns cannot be used to re-grow oak trees in this country as they have deemed them as not pure enough.

So thanks to foreign imports and the EU our mighty oaks could be lost forever!

True or false - what's your verdict?

For three days during the first week in June, The Sun's agony aunt, Deirdre Sanders covered this story...

Dear Deirdre's Photo Casebook - 'Wani's Dating Woes'

Wani is a Pakistani Girl who has fallen for an English lad, Simon. To cut a long story short Simon has met Wani's parents and has been accepted, but then he tells Wani that she cannot meet his parents as they will not accept her because she is of a different race. Amazingly, Deirdre does not condemn Simon's parents for being racist and bigoted, but tells Wani that she must try to understand how his parents feel. "You feel used, but try to understand your young man's feelings. He loves his parents and they want to hang on to values which they worry will be lost if their young son marries an outsider."

EU fridge mountain freezes our assets

by Steve Johnson

After the Butter Mountain and the Beef Mountain, the Eurocrats have now given us the Fridge Mountain!

Over a million old fridges have piled up and been fly tipped around the country because of EU bureaucracy and muddle.

Confused and unclear EU regulations, which came into force in January, ban councils dumping old fridges in landfill sites. It was, however, unclear what Brussels wanted the councils to do with them instead, so they just piled up all over the place.

Now councils across the country are running out of space to store the EU's Fridge Mountain. Newport, South Wales, alone has now got a pile of 30,000 old fridges on its hands, with more piling up by the day.

After no fewer than nine official requests by the British Government for clarification of the muddled rules proclaimed by Brussels as far back as 1998, it has now become clear that expensive special disposal plants will have to be built for the Fridge Mountain.

In the meantime our old fridges will have to be shipped to such plants on the Continent. The cost to you and me, the British taxpayers, is expected to reach £64 million. £6 million of our money has already been spent on coping with this Brussels bureaucratic mess.

The Fridge Mountain is made higher because major "white goods" retailers have had to stop taking old fridges off peoples' hands for free when they bought a new fridge. The retailers used to send the old fridges to benefit people in the Third World. But the EU has now banned this too. So when you buy a new fridge you are stuck with your old one.

Local councils used to take old fridges away for nothing. Because of the cost of storing their Fridge Mountains, many councils now charge up to £40 to take away a fridge. Rather than pay this, many people are now fly tipping their old fridges all over the place.

This shambles, which is littering the British countryside with heaps of old fridges, is just the latest nonsense inflicted on the British people by the unelected bureaucracy in Brussels. In a report on this mess by the Parliamentary Environment Committee, published on June 20th, M.P.s concluded that the new EU fridge rules were such a confused muddle that the Government should never have agreed to them in the first place.

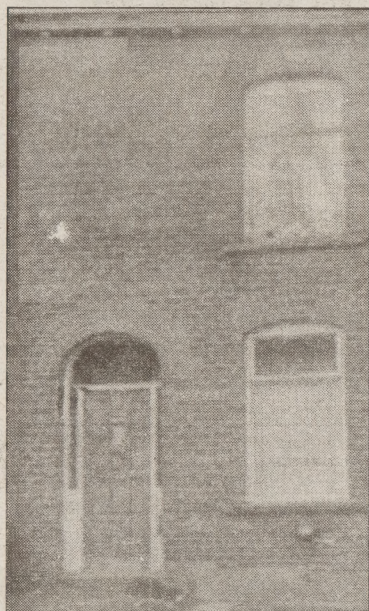

But of course the British Government had no choice because EU regulations outrank British laws.

We will continue to have such bureaucratic nonsense rammed down our throats by the Eurocrats - often with consequences worse than Fridge Mountains - as long as we stay ruled by Brussels. As long as we stay a province of their "European Union". The remedy to this ongoing EU nightmare is in our hands....

Newport, South Wales, alone has now got a pile of 30,000 old fridges on its hands, with more piling up by the day.

16 voters were registered at this 2 bedroom house in Oldham

"ELECTION FRAUD makes a mockery of our democratic system. It will not be tolerated in Oldham".

That's the pledge of Oldham Police's Detective Chief Inspector, Martin Bottomley, who is in charge of the largest investigation ever of electoral fraud in the town.

But nearly two months on, the inquiry is still far from completion with a police press officer acknowledging,

"Our inquiries have now been extended throughout the borough of Oldham."

Included in the investigation are addresses in St James' ward where BNP candidate Roy Goodwin failed to get elected by just 91 votes.

The extent of the fraud has been described as 'frightening' by one council officer. In one street in Werneth, three two-bedroomed terraced houses had a total of 48 voters registered. When Freedom visited these properties, two of them appeared empty with rubbish filling a front room, while the third was answered by an elderly Pakistani gentleman who could speak no English.

During the election the Sunday Mirror claimed the BNP were behind the fraud, but now Oldham Police have confirmed that the names under investigation are all Pakistani, Bangladeshi or Indian.

BNP launch vital Staff Support Fund

YOU MAY ALREADY be aware that, rather than an old-fashioned headquarters building, the BNP operates a 'virtual headquarters', with the individuals who run our national operation based in different part of the country and in regular contact with each other.

Some of these head office staff are paid full-time or part-time, while others have jobs which allow them to do their national BNP work on a reimbursements only basis.

port Team in Burnley.

Former City insurance broker, Chris Roberts is the new London and Essex Regional organiser, while the successful Burnley election agent, Simon Bennett, heads the Councillor Support Team.

If we fail to expand in this way we would choke on our own success.

It's an expensive step to take, so in order to make it sustainable, we are taking up offers made by our members to start paying regular amounts by Standing

Regular payments to help build a professional party

Unavoidably, this operation costs a lot of money. In order to cope with, and sustain, our present rapid growth, we are adding another five people to our national team, which now involves 29 people.

They include our first ever full-time regional organiser, in London, extra administration staff and a vital Councillor Sup-

Order to help to meet the cost of this essential and very welcome expansion.

This scheme is to be called the Staff Support Fund, and we urge everyone with a bank account to join this if you can possibly afford it.

Subscribers will receive a regular quarterly bulletin full of 'inside news' explaining the sort of difference the Fund is making.

The recommended amount is just £20 a month, less than £1 a day, which won't break the bank. But it is a sum which will make a significant difference to our ability to keep on expanding.

Please send your first payment by cheque made payable to 'Voice of Freedom' to The Treasurer, P. O. Box 16, York YO61 3YH; or call 01347-824177 for a Standing Order Form.

EAST BRIDGFORD: Only the BNP was prepared to help

"Without the British National Party I don't know what we would have done"

These were the words sent to the organiser of the rapidly expanding BNP Branch in Nottingham by a resident of the village of East Bridgford just east of the city.

"Not one of our county's MPs or councillors, whether they are Labour, Liberal Democrat or Conservative have responded in the positive way that the currently unelected local BNP members have done.

"I cannot thank you and your colleagues enough for helping myself, my family and neighbours achieve an outcome which will stop this insane scheme and let us continue to live in a crime free neighbourhood and allow our children to carry on walking to school unharmed.

"I cannot understand why we are being selected for such an imposition apart from that we think we are being punished because we didn't vote Labour!"

Over 1500 locals joined BNP activists to protest against their village being swamped by those claiming to be asylum seekers. East Bridgford is a village under siege, earmarked as a suitable camp for hundreds of economic migrants because there was no opposition to the initial proposal.

VOICE OF FREEDOM SPORT

If only the players had shown the same passion as the fans!

A PART FROM A thoroughly professional performance against Denmark and a dour defensive display against Argentina, England's World Cup campaign was a bitter disappointment.

Together with France, Spain and Italy, England paraded the highest paid footballers in the world and yet, for all their skill and technical ability, they failed to impress against teams made up of players paid a fraction of their wages.

Senegal was a team where the majority of the squad ply their trade in the French Second Division - which is on a par with our Nationwide Third Division and Conference - yet they played with such a passion and commitment that their performances put those of England in the shade.

The same applies to our neighbours across the Irish Sea. Mick McCarthy's men played with great pride and although earning a fraction of the salaries of the England players, proved a side prepared to take on the best in the world.

Sven Goran-Eriksson might be the world's best football tactician but he's certainly no motivator. With a bit of urging from the bench, England had a great chance to redeem the situation against Brazil when Ronaldinho was sent off with 40 minutes remaining. There should have been a 'blood and thunder' all out assault on the Brazilian goal with wave after wave of England attacks - but we couldn't even manage one shot to test Brazil's suspect keeper.

TOP: Sven's a great tactician but no motivator. RIGHT: Far more tears were shed in our pubs and clubs by people who didn't have a huge wage packet waiting for them back home. ABOVE: England's much maligned supporters were superb!

If the England players had had a fraction of the passion that their supporters showed at 7.30 in the morning in every town throughout the country, it might have been a different story.

But it's probably hard for players to get passionate about playing football just for the pride of their country once every four years, when they get paid huge amounts of money just to turn out for their club every weekend.

BBC was just looking to smear countryside lobby

by Sue Langley

NOW I tend to have reservations about undercover programmes, especially when they're on the BBC. It's because you know you are only getting the Corporation's politically correct version of events, designed to influence the audience to take one particular standpoint.

"Kenyon Confronts" was advertised as an undercover investigation into the fixing of horseracing, but turned out to be a hatchet job on National Hunt trainers.

Investigator Paul Kenyon claimed that trainers ran their horse down the field in some races to get a more lenient handicapping (the weight a horse has to carry). This is no earth-shattering revelation. Almost every day-to-day punter knows this happens, and it provides a certain challenge to form students to work out which horses are trying and which are not.

WRONG CODE PAUL! Doctoring the handicap is a flat racing scam

But what was a revelation was that "Kenyon Confronts" chose to expose it as something perpetrated by jumping trainers.

The shortest race over the jumps is 2 miles and in most cases at least eight obstacles have to be jumped. The difference of a pound or two in the handicap doesn't change the result of these races, only improved jumping. On the flat however, when the shortest race is just 5 furlongs with no obstacles to be negotiated, the weight or lack of it carried by a horse does have a bearing on the result.

Why Kenyon decided to try to tar jump trainers with what is, in the main, a flat racing scam seems bizarre. Until, that is, you understand the close relationship between jump racing and its trainers and the sport of hunting with hounds.

The politically correct BBC wasn't interested in investigating race-fixing, but was just looking for some dirt to throw at the countryside lobby in an effort to discredit them in the eyes of the public.
